responsible for communicating with those services, programs, and/or providers, as allowed by the consumer or their guardian or legal representative, to ensure a coordinated transition.

4.1 Linkage to Appropriate Care – Danger to Self or Others

When case coordinators/therapists assess a consumer to be a danger to self or others, that staff shall immediately respond and provide crisis response services and as appropriate, make referrals to agencies or resources that can best prevent any harm to the consumer and others.

When a person is discharged or removed from a service for aggressive and/or assaultive behavior, follow-up will occur within 24 hours post-discharge to ensure linkage to appropriate care.

5.0 Transition and Discharge

Transition services are critical for the support of the consumer's ongoing recovery or well-being. Transition or discharge planning is initiated as soon as clinically appropriate in the person-centered planning and service delivery process and assists consumers to move from one level of care to another within our organization or to obtain services that are needed but are not available within the organization. Transition planning will occur according to organization policy and procedures.

Transition may include planned discharge, movement to a different level of service or intensity of contact. The transition plan is developed with and for the consumer and other interested parties to guide the consumer in activities following transition/discharge to support the gains made during participation in services. It is prepared with the active participation of the consumer when they move to another level of care. The transition plan is meant to be a plan that the consumer uses to identify the support that is needed to prevent a recurrence of symptoms or reduction in functioning. It is expected that the consumer and appropriate parties receive a copy of the transition or discharge plan.
